

WORKING TOGETHER

Anglo American has been a part of the Hunter Valley community for 30 years. Operating in a sustainable way and contributing to long-term community development is at the heart of everything we do.

Anglo American always keeps community and government expectations in mind when we develop a mining project. This is why we have robust environmental management plans for all our operations to minimise environmental impacts.

We have spent $60 million on technical reports while developing the future Drayton South mine plan and made multiple changes over five years of consultation to develop the project responsibly. Mining and agricultural activities have long operated side-by-side in the Hunter Valley and by working together, we can continue to do so into the future.

We have provided independent expert reports, which shows mining at the Drayton South project will have no detrimental affects on the health of horses on adjoining properties.

We are in mining for the long term. The Drayton South project means a future for our 500 employees, ongoing economic investment in the local community of up to $70 million a year, $35 million annually in State Government Royalties and employment opportunities for young people.

Our employees are part of the community too and want to see the same high environmental standards maintained for the Drayton South project.

We have a proud history in the Hunter Valley that we hope to continue into the future through the development of the Drayton South project.
