

CULTURAL HERITAGE

At Anglo American we are committed to conserving and protecting the cultural heritage of the areas in which we operate.

During the early stages of project planning, Anglo American identifies the need for a Cultural Heritage Management Plan. These management plans are developed in consultation and agreement with the Traditional Owners of the land.

Prior to project activity on the land, we inspect the area with the Traditional Owners and a supporting archaeologist will also inspect the land where required. If sacred objects such as scar trees and stone flakes are discovered, they are carefully protected or relocated to a safe keeping place until construction activities cease.

If land of significance is discovered, we develop an agreement to preserve and restrict access to the area with the Traditional Owners. Working with the Traditional Owners to record, conserve and preserve land and artefacts ensures their rich cultural heritage remains for future generations.

Some of Anglo American's mining leases are within areas that have been identified as areas of European settlement and agricultural land use. Prior to any work commencing, the land is surveyed to classify potential non-indigenous cultural heritage and we develop and implement management plans as required.

The restored historical Kianga Huts are permanently displayed at the Rockhampton and District Historical Centre.

At Dawson mine in 2010, we partnered with the Moura Historical Society to restore the historical Kianga Huts which were originally located on our mine lease. The Kianga Homestead was originally built in the 1870s and is an important part of early sheep production in the district. The restored huts were donated to the Rockhampton and District Historical Centre where they are located permanently for viewing.
